

Cooke Building comes crumbling down

Jun 12, 2020

SANDUSKY – Crews finished razing the Cooke Building in downtown Sandusky. The demolition was originally scheduled to start Wednesday, but crews delayed it because of wind. The structure was demolished Thursday and Friday. Crews will take about a week to clear debris before beginning a building project.

Property owners Rick and Meghan Hogrefe want to build an entirely new structure in its place, which will resemble the Cooke Building.

Check out the video on the

Sandusky Register website to watch some of the building's demolition.
